

Going Green – My Environment Advice and Tips

Stephen McDonagh

Ireland's environment is a fundamental and high-quality national asset that provides a strong foundation for healthy and contented lives. Here are a few VITAL TIPS to make it better, cleaner and safer to be in.

Make Your Voice Heard: You can voice out your concerns on the issue to big businesses and corporations, do public volunteer work with many others or write a letter to a local newspaper.

Reuse Single-Use Items(eg. plastic): Find reusable options to use more than once other than straws, disposable razors and plastic grocery bags. You can reuse those items when they're well and necessary after first use.

Buy Locally, Eat More Plants and Compost: When you buy locally, you can get foods in a FRESHER and FLAVOURABLE state and cut down on transportation and processing. Grow your own fruits and vegetables in your back garden and eat more, cutting down on several meat servings. Instead of dumping away wet waste, compost them for your other plants in your back garden. Composting also reduces volumes in landfills.

Plant Trees and Landscapes with Native Plants: Green living areas in cities and suburbs are VITAL as they do their part in keeping the environment clean. By planting a tree and a few plants today, water can be conserved, carbon pollution is reduced, local wildlife is supported and unadulterated oxygen can be made a reality for our kids.

Reduce Use of Greenhouse Gases: If this action is undertaken, the world can be more supported along with the local environments and prevent sunlight OVERHEATING the Earth. When this happens, this is a form of GLOBAL WARMING.

So please, follow these tips and make the world and the environment around you a much better place. Our actions are deemed consequential all the time but make sure you make the right choices this time around to ensure Earth's survival for many more years.
